Bowser Starts For War

But Returns Again

* (Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mr. Bowser was half an hour late in coming up to dinner and Mrs. Bowser had begun to worry for fear of him. He shook hands with Mrs. Bowaccident, when he arrived. He came along in a brisk, excited sort of way, He went up to the corner again and reand he had not yet entered the door when he called out:

"Is that dinner ready? I have only ten minutes to spare."

"What is it?" she asked, as she followed him down to the dining room. "It has come, Mrs. Bowser. I have ney, and his reply to each was: held myself back long as possible on your account, but it has come now." "What do you mean, Mr. Bowser?"

"I mean that I am going to war. Yes, sir, five of us in the office enlisted this afternoon.
